

OSLT

Occupation-specific Language Training

Overview

Occupation-specific Language Training (OSLT) is offered at no cost for newcomers to Ontario. Participants must be permanent residents or protected persons who live in Ontario and who have:

- training or experience in a specific occupation or sector but need to improve their occupation-specific communication skills.
- language proficiency of at least level 5 in Canadian Language Benchmarks (CLB), or Niveaux de compétence linguistique canadiens (NCLC) for courses taught in French (for skilled trades at least level 4 in CLB/ NCLC).

Participants will develop the language and communication skills needed to:

- understand workplace culture in their occupation and sector.
- interact effectively with their colleagues, clients and supervisors.
- give and receive information by email and telephone.
- interview and network effectively.

FLAP Formation linguistique axée sur les professions

Occupation-specific Language Training

Features innovative curriculum designed by content and language experts

- Language experts worked with occupational content experts to develop the workplace-oriented OSJT curriculum for priority occupations and industry sectors.
- The OSJT curriculum uses a common framework to address sector, occupation and socio-cultural communication skills in a consistent way.

Builds a practical understanding of workplace culture

- Participants develop a strong understanding of typical workplace communication and socio-cultural dimensions within their sector and occupation in Ontario.
- Participants learn to interact effectively and communicate clearly with clients, colleagues and supervisors within their workplace culture.

Provides supports to help newcomers connect to the local labour market

- College partnerships with local employers and industry associations help participants connect with the local labour market through job fairs and networking events.
- Colleges offer career-planning assistance, and provide participants with referrals and connections to employment-related resources at the college and in the community.

Delivered in a variety of formats at Ontario colleges

- Full-time and part-time Workplace Communications Skills courses using the OSJT Curriculum are offered by Ontario colleges.
- Courses are delivered in a classroom-based format that is web-enhanced, a blended format that combines classroom and online elements, and exclusively online. Classroom-based and blended courses are 40, 140 or 180 hours, while online courses and modules are 40 hours.
- Multi-site delivery to participants in different geographic areas using internet-based technology is available for some OSJT courses.
- All courses are delivered by qualified college language instructors.
- Most courses are offered in English (OSJT); some are also offered in French as FLAP (la formation linguistique axée sur les professions).
- A network of college coordinators can help participants find the right OSJT course for them.

Positions newcomers for success and supports Ontario's economy

- OSJT meets the career communication needs of newcomers and positions them for employment or further education in their field.
- OSJT provides links to the local labour market to help newcomers find and maintain work commensurate with their skills and experience in their occupation.
- OSJT meets Ontario's skilled labour needs by helping newcomers integrate into the workforce.

Ontario's 24 colleges support the lifelong learning and training needs of community members at over 100 campuses across the province. Colleges are a visible first point of entry for newcomers looking for information on pathways to employment, credentials and skills assessment, language training, upgrading of skills and knowledge, and post-secondary education and training.
